COMMUNITY WEEK 2014

INCLUSIVE SOCIETY - ITS RIGHTS AND DUTIES

Invitation Kit 2014

Community Week

Sept. 1st - 10th, 2014

Welcome to Dhillon Marty Foundation's third annual conference, Community Week 2014! Each year, international students and scholars from art, design, social and physical sciences converge to learn, contribute and and reflect about the region and topics that are fertile ground for advancing research in their field of expertise for seeding social, economic and environmentally sustainable societies.

Punjab, India
September 1 - 10, 2014

The conference is fitting to India's traditions, from the foundation of its cultural and religious history, through the present day integration of its multi-faith demographics.

Inclusive Society - Its rights and duties

The conference topic is intended to encompass additional questions that we will ask all participants to contemplate during the competition and symposium.

Inclusive Society: What can we learn from our World history of many different models of governance, urban designs and economic models to design a utopian society for the 21st century and beyond for a sustainable future for our small earth?

Rights and Duties: How do we balance between the rights and duties of people, the environment and the society at large for the betterment of all in a sustainable manner?

Learn

Participants will have the opportunity to visit and experience Punjab's historical sites, villages, cities, landscape, nature, culture and people.

Contribute

This will be carried out through a competition to design infrastructure that focuses on inclusive societies.

Reflect

The conference will conclude with a day of symposium and exhibition of completed works.

Challenge 2014 : Public Toilets, A Civic Necessity

Vision

Inclusive society is an idea where everyone has the right to reach its potential while upholding the balance between his or her needs against the needs of the society. If a society does not have the same basic sense of cleanliness, how can people work or live together? People, from birth or even prenatal care, need access to food, sanitation, health and education for vocational and ethical development. As a visitor to India, the first thing one sees everywhere is poor sanitation; therefore, we have chosen to present this issue for this year's Community Week as a challenge problem.

Design Challenge

This issue can be tackled in any form or genre, from a physical design, a public service campaign to a policy paper.
